Tiger Fighter 1931-Sunset is a Shoot 'Em Up Shooting Action game developed and published by Koei. For the release of the original Tiger Fighter in 1991, the developers of the shooting action game had wanted to make one of the games with elements of a role playing game. This was a visual presentation of the game to the players, as well as the game having an anime-style music score. The game was released in Japan in 1991 as Tiger Fighter 1931-Sunset, and was then released in North America in October 1993, and in Europe and Australia in 1994. The genre of this game was originally a shoot 'em up game with elements of a role playing game, and is designed so that the player can fully experience the game while wearing their own costume. The game is the third title in the Tiger Fighter series, and is often confused for the first two titles, Tiger Fighter 2 and Tiger Fighter II. Like Tiger Fighter 2 and Tiger Fighter II, the title is available as an expansion pack for Tiger Fighter 1, but the three games are not compatible. Each is a standalone title and cannot be played while using the file from the other two. The development and release of this game was done by Natsume, who have previously released the role playing game series, Tobal II: Unlimited Blade Works. In addition to the role playing game elements added to the Tiger Fighter series, there are many other new elements added to the game. The concept behind the development of Tiger Fighter 1931-Sunset included the idea of having a game with elements of a role playing game. Tiger Fighter 1931-Sunset uses the Empire v2 engine and is also compatible with Empire v2. Tiger Fighter 1931-Sunset has characters that can be customized with various weapons and attributes. In this game, there is no screen with character select. The transition between the main game screen and the sub-screen is immediate and seamless. An additional costume for Jia Chong "Knight Costume" will be available for use. This season pass will be included with the following items, and the season pass will not be available separately: A "Tiger Fighter 1931-Sunset" skin care item. " " ------ dagobart I read the whole article but I still don't get what's so special about this occult lens? "Mathematically calibrated", "100% contrast", "filters can be adjusted within one stop", "specially designed and designed to correct aberrations in the light path"? Is it like "adjustable brightness" functions if the new LED matrix monitors? ------ thatgdave Okay so I realize that the lenses can be adjusted within one stop if I want, but that doesn't mean it's impossible to misadjust them. Say a lens was adjusted at 70%, and then I misadjusted them by +5, not realizing how big a difference it actually was from 70% accuracy. In other words, once opened, would it still be 100% accurate? What if I bought a PC screen and opened it and it didn't do much of anything because it was 100% accurate and there were no changes to alter the accuracy? ~~~ rjurney I will say that I have a dozen lenses open now to test this, and they are exactly 100% accurate across the entire lens range. I have calibrated a colorimeter and my telescope and nothing has occurred. I did the same thing myself 20 yrs ago but it took many months. I can easily adjust brightness, white point, luminance, tint, etc. instantly and accurately by dialing up or down with crummy knobs. However, I have not had luck calibrating a screen using controls, either before or after eclipse, so I can't say that this is an eclipse-only thing. However, I haven't been able to come up with a reason why, since the screen color control works smoothly until the screen is seen, yet the PC control does not work during eclipse. You just have to eyeball it and hv a calibration needs. Good luck! ------ michaelcampbell Awesome! But, again... why? I dunno. I get that it's because until recently, computer screens were all monochromatic. It's sad to see that color screens are such low quality now. I mean, it looks OK.
